Department Mission:

The mission of our department is to help you grow in these ways:

1. Develop a style of service and ministry that cares for the full range of human needs.
2. Be equipped for immediate ministry vocations in churches, para-church organization, etc., by balancing biblical and theological education with the practical skills necessary for ministry.
3. Have the necessary foundation on which to pursue theological education at the graduate level.
4. Develop skills in interpersonal relationships that reflect biblical values.
5. Learn how to study the Bible and to relate its message to today's world.
6. Be acquainted with the major philosophies and religious systems of the world.
7. Be especially prepared for ministry within the Missionary Church or the student's own denomination, with an awareness of the Body of Christ.

Department Distinctives:

For students who have a double major that includes Philosophy, those students would not have to take PHIL250 Introduction to Philosophy because the upper level courses required for the Philosophy major satisfy the content of PHIL250.

Students who desire to pursue ministry must be admitted to the program by the faculty of the Division of Religion & Philosophy. Application must be made during the sophomore year. Admission is based on satisfactory performance in introductory Bible courses, a satisfactory statement of Christian experience and suitability for Christian ministry. See the chairperson for information.

*Required of Missionary Church students

Intercultural Studies

The intercultural studies major challenges and equips for cross cultural engagement; communication; and understanding in life, work, and service. The world is "becoming smaller" as technology advances, people migrate, and opportunities continue to expand. This major is for the person who loves the challenge of diversity and encountering new experiences through people, worldviews, and cultures. A highlight of this major is spending at least one semester developing cross-cultural skills in a service-oriented internship.

An interdisciplinary major, intercultural studies empowers students to analyze and engage global issues from Christian theological, philosophical and social science perspectives. The intercultural studies major will double with nearly any major thus providing a competitive advantage in seeking employment both overseas and at home in business, communications, education, not-for-profit, and ministry or in seeking further graduate studies.

Philosophy Major

Philosophy programs at many Christian colleges are primarily degrees in apologetics or Christian ethics. This is not the case at Bethel. Ours is a true philosophy degree. Philosophy faculty have earned PhD's in philosophy from major research universities. Our courses cover the traditional systematic areas of philosophy and aim for a broad understanding of the problems with which professional philosophers are engaged. But we make no apologies for the explicitly Christian perspective from which our courses are taught.

The vast majority of our philosophy students also have majors in other disciplines like history, literature, mathematics, and biblical literature. Our students go to graduate school in these disciplines, as well as law school and medical school, or directly into other jobs. The study of philosophy cultivates the abilities to read and write critically, to understand the subtleties of complex problems, to comprehend the strengths and weaknesses of various viewpoints, and to persuade and motivate—skills that are sought after in any vocation.

Worship Arts Major

The worship arts major prepares students for a career in church worship, with additional training in areas such as technology, church operations and pastoral leadership. This major is uniquely designed for students who prefer to customize classes to match their personal skills and interests. Three tracks – media arts, theatre arts and Biblical theology – allow students to focus on their strengths, while also getting the core curriculum they need for a well-rounded education.
